What is an Ultrasound?

An ultrasound scan is a medical test that uses high frequency sound waves to produce images of structures within your body. The images can provide valuable information for diagnosing and treating a variety of diseases and conditions.

This ultrasound exam is used to check the thickness of the muscle between a baby's stomach and intestines.

Preparation:

The patient is to have nothing by mouth (NPO) for 2 hours prior to the scheduled exam, if possible.

Procedure:

You will be asked to lie on a bed or stretcher. Prior to beginning the examination, a technologist will ask you to move or remove clothing in the area to be imaged. For your privacy, only the area to be imaged will be uncovered. A warm gel will be placed on your skin. The technologist will use a hand-held instrument (called a transducer) against your skin to acquire images. The ultrasound exam will take between 30 and 60 minutes, depending on the type of exam ordered.
