What is a CT Scan?

A Computed Tomography (CT) scan – sometimes called CAT scan – is a non-invasive, painless medical test that helps providers diagnose and treat medical conditions.

CT imaging uses special X-ray equipment to produce multiple images or pictures of the inside of the body. A computer joins them together in cross-sectional views of the area being studied. The images can then be examined and interpreted from the computer.

CT scans of internal organs, bone, soft tissues and blood vessels provide greater clarity than conventional X-ray exams.

What is a CT Guided Chest Tube Placement?

A CT guided chest tube placement is a procedure where a radiologist inserts a thin plastic tube into the chest to remove excess fluid or air. This procedure uses CT images to accurately place the plastic tube. During the procedure you will be lying on the scanner table. You will be given a local anesthetic that will numb the area around the site of the procedure. You will also have an IV placed for any medications that may be given to you. You will be asked to hold very still and hold your breath during certain times of the exam.

The biopsy will take approximately 45 – 60 minutes.

Preparation:

Do not eat anything after midnight the night before. Nothing to drink EXCEPT clear liquids up to 3 hours before procedure.

For more preparation instructions regarding medications, speak to your provider.

Because your procedure will require signing a consent to complete the exam, Mercy requests you do not take any narcotics, sedatives or anti-anxiety medications four hours preceding your scheduled exam.

Note: if you require anesthesia for your exam, you will receive a separate set of instructions from the anesthesia department.

Post Procedure:

You will be monitored and required to recover following the procedure.

You will be given additional post-procedure instructions following the exam.
